How to Take Care of Your Patio Cover

Patio covers are very low maintenance, but even the best low maintenance products require a little care.

Your patio cover is comprised of two very easy to care for products. Acrylic, which is basically the same material as the tail lights on your car, and powder coated aluminum for a structurally sound frame.

To care for your patio cover is easy. Rinsing your patio cover with fresh water from the garden hose regularly is the easiest way to maintain the product.

For annual cleaning just wash it like you would your car. Even though the acrylic has a self cleaning feature, I have found that a more thorough annual cleanings is still necessary to keep your patio cover in the best condition.

Important! Do not stand on your patio cover to clean it. You could slip and fall. Your patio covers self cleaning feature make the surface extremely slick when wet.

I recommend you use a long handle RV brush to access the top of your patio cover from a secure position or location and to lightly scrub the top surface using car soap or a mild detergent in a five gallon bucket with water. Let the soap set for a few minutes loosening any pollen and grim then rinse with fresh water from a garden hose.

That's it. Your patio cover is clean, will look fresh, and you will be set to enjoy another year in your awesome outdoor living space.
